Name: Carson Allen

Leadership Type	Definition of this type of leadership style	What does this mean? Explain the definition in your own words.	Where do you see examples of this type of leadership (in the real world or fictional works)?
Democratic (participative)	It is when there is one leader but everyone has a say in it and they try to make the majority happy.	So people have votes to see what the majority wants the most and this way there are more people happy.	In the real world you will see this leadership in governments and elections when people are voting for their new leader and who ever has the majority votes will win.
Authoritarian (autocratic)	favoring complete obedience or subjection to authority as opposed to individual freedom	It is really like a dictator because the leader does what ever they want with no input from anyone else.	In the real world you can see this kind of leadership on a sports team because everyone has to do what the head coach says and the head coach doesn't take input they just do what they think is right.
Delegative (laissez fair)	a policy or attitude of letting things take their own course, without interfering.	You can do anything without anyone telling you what you can and can't do and this way they think that everyone is equal being able to do whatever.	In the real world you will see this kind of leadership for google workers because they can design it how ever they want it to look and they can work anytime a day that they want to.
